MINISTER TAKES SHOT AT THEATRES

Dr. C. E. Asbury, Pastor of First M. E. Church, Bitterly Denounces the Playhouse.

SIXTY MEMBERS TAKE PLEDGE

Agree Not to Attend Any Theatre For One Year.—Minister Scores Card Playing.

Dr. C. E. Asbury, pastor of the First M. E. Church, bitterly denounced the theatre in his sermon Sunday evening, and in response to his invitation over sixty members made a public pledge not to attend such places of amusements for one year. The minister is strongly opposed to all forms of the theatre, including the electric shows and home talents. He said that if the members of the churches would not patronize the plays the theatres would be compelled to go into bankruptcy, and it is, therefore, the church members who support this harmful amusement.

At the beginning of his address he gave a short history of the first theatres and said that they were originated about 2,500 years ago to amuse persons who assembled for revelry and drinking. He quoted from several ancient philosophers and more modern writers to show that the theatre had an ill effect upon any community. In heathen countries, said the speaker, the playhouse does not exist to such a degree as in civilized countries.

Dr. Asbury said that no form of theatre should be supported since the conditions connected with the play and under which the actors and actresses live were grossly immoral. He asserted that if the theatre goers knew the conditions back of the scenes they would hesitate to remain in the audience and witness the plays. The habit of attending the theatre grows, he declared, and while those who attend begin with the intention of going only to the best plays, they soon are regular patrons at all kinds. He said the manager of a so-called high-class playhouse told him that the immoral shows were more profitable than the others, and the reason these were given was because the church members enjoyed them better.

Dr. Asbury spoke of the plays which come to Seymour, and said that while he did not know much about them he was of the opinion that the conditions here were much the same as in other cities. This opinion was supported because one play was presented here which was not permitted to appear in the "rotten town of Vincennes."

He said that he was opposed even to grand operas since the moral conditions surrounding the persons participating were much the same as in plays of a different character. He said he did not believe that all persons connected with plays were immoral, but thought the rule applied to the large majority of them.

The electric shows came in for their part of the denunciation. He said that the acts which are committed under the cover of the darkened rooms were of a far more serious result than the majority of persons supposed. In speaking of the home talents Dr. Asbury said that they simply lead to plays of a baser character and should not be supported.

During his address he gave his opinion regarding the amusements and games which should be allowed in the homes. Any game which has an element of chance or which is played with cards which have long been used for gambling should be prohibited. Bridge and progressive euchre were scored, the speaker referring to the latter as "progressive damnation."

Dr. Asbury said that when he was in Washington he secured the pledge of one hundred members of the church not to attend any play for one year, and during that year the playhouse became bankrupt. He asked how many members present would promise not attend any nickle show or other theatre for one year and about sixty arose to indicate that hey would accept the terms of the pledge.

BAD EGGS

Many Are Sold in Indiana.—Loss to Farmers and Buyers.

The following egg bulletin has been issued by A. G. Phillips, Associate in Poultry Husbandry at the Purdue Experiment Station:

The farms of Indiana produced over 72,000,000 dozen eggs, valued at over $12,000,000, in 1910. A large proportion of these eggs were not first-class in quality, many of them being small, dirty, washed, cracked, stale or rotten. The following figures, taken from Circular No. 140 of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, are given to show the per cent. of undesirable eggs that are sold upon the market in the middle western states:

Dirties	2 per cent.
Broken	2 per cent.
Chick development	5 per cent.
Shrunken or held	5 per cent.
Rotten	2½ per cent.
Mouldy	½ per cent.
Total	17 per cent.

Observation of conditions in Indiana has not shown that the eggs of this state are any better than any other state; in fact, some reports seem to indicate that the reverse is true. Assuming that the above figures are applicable to Indiana, it is fair to state that the annual loss to farmers selling good eggs amounts to over $2,210,000. This amount might therefore be saved to the producer without extra cost to the consumer, if buyers would buy eggs on their merits. Eggs with few exceptions, are sold at so much per dozen, regardless of quality. This method of selling is called "Case Count." When the large buyers quote a price to a huckster, grocer or farmer, they take into consideration the fact that during certain seasons of the year, there will be a certain proportion of undesirable eggs, that can bring them no profit and result only in a loss. To meet this loss, the buyer must quote a price lower than he could pay, if he knew all the eggs would be good. Therefore, the farmer producing and selling only strictly first-class eggs, pays for the loss due to the bad ones. For example, at a certain season of the year, the eggs will run 15 per cent. rotten. To meet this loss the buyer must quote a price 15 per cent. lower than he could have given if the eggs had all been first-class. Every farmer does not sell poor eggs. Many sell a fresh product and help to lessen the total percentage of the undesirable eggs. If every producer sold some bad eggs the price would be lower. Therefore, the man who sells the strictly fresh eggs pays for the loss on account of the bad ones.

With the present system of buying eggs there is no incentive to the producer to market first-class eggs, since the price is the same for poorer ones. Many times the question is asked by the man who always markets fresh eggs, "Why is it that I receive no more for my fresh eggs than some of my neighbors, who are not as particular as to the quality of the eggs marketed?" As a matter of fairness, he should not be compelled to take the same price as his neighbor who sells bad eggs, in order that he may protect the buyer who will not buy on the basis of quality. Many buyers feel that they could afford to pay an increase of two cents per dozen over the regular quotations; in fact, one buyer offered as high as five cents over local quotations.

If a farmer kept 150 hens, which produced an average of only 100 eggs per year, the increase of two cents per dozen would mean an added profit of $25.00 per year. This increased profit is well worth the additional effort that would be necessary to obtain it.

Purdue Experiment Station is collecting data upon this subject and endeavoring through education to overcome this immense annual loss and to interest the farmers in demanding better, prices for their good eggs without increased cost to the consumer.

WHEAT DAMAGED BY HESSIAN FLY

Several Fields in the County Are Practically Destroyed by This Little Insect.

HAMILTON TOWNSHIP SUFFERS

Wheat Sown After September 20, Has Been Least Injured by the Old Enemy.

In several parts of the county the Hessian fly has again made its appearance in the wheat fields and the farmers fear that much of the grain will be destroyed. This little enemy has not done much damage in this county for several years, although it was predicted last year that unless proper precautions were taken they would likely be seen in the fields this spring. In Hamilton township the greatest damage has been done, and it is reported that many acres of fine wheat are practically ruined by the ravages of the insect. In other parts of the county the fly has been seen, but less serious damage has been done. In the south part of the county the grain is in good condition and is said to be equal to the standard.

Last fall the wheat specialists of the experimental station at Purdue gave the warning that the Hessian fly would probably appear this year and in order to prevent a loss of the crop urged that the wheat be sown not earlier than September 20 They declared that if it was sown before that time the fly would prove injurious. Many of the farmers in this county accepted the advice given and waited until that late date before placing the seed in the ground, and most of this is in good condition. However, some of the late sown wheat has been injured this spring. A number of the fields were sown early and as a rule these are damaged by the insect.

Shortly after the wheat came through the ground last fall there were several reports that the Hessian fly had appeared, and a number of the fields were destroyed and resown. Most of the fields were resown after the date set by the Purdue specialists and with a few exceptions no damage has been done this spring by the fly.

The reports from other parts of the state ndicate that the fly is at work in the fields and that much of the wheat will be damaged. The farmers are watching with much interest the result of the fields which were sown according to the instructions of the Purdue experimental station.

MRS. R. M. J. COX DEAD.

Deceased Was the Daughter of the Late Samuel Wirt.

Mrs. R. M. J. Cox, daughter of the late Dr. Samuel Wirt, whose name is connected with much of the early history of Jackson county, died last Saturday evening at her home in Indianapolis after an illness of several months with a complication of diseases. Having lived the greater part of her life in this county she had a large acquaintance and many friends among whom she was regarded with the highest respect because of her excellent qualities and true Christian character.

Celestus Wirt was born at Brownstown January 13, 1832, making her exact age seventy-nine years, two months and five days. She received her education at a college at Salem which was conducted under the management of Prof. Mayes, one of the prominent early educators in Indiana. On January 25, 1854 she was married to R. M. J. Cox and in that year they moved to Taylorsville where they resided until 1861, returning directly to Seymour. She was the mother of eleven children, seven of whom are living. Alpha Cox and Mrs. Charles Kessler reside in Seymour, and Frank, Charles, Will, Bert and Miss Nettie reside at Indianapolis. Her husband died here in 1901. At an early age she affiliated with the Baptist church and her life has been one of a conscientious christian woman. During her long illness she was patient and ever uncomplaining of the sufferings which she endured.

The remains were brought here this morning and taken to Brownstown where the funeral services were held this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, conructed by the Rev. William Carson, pastor of the Sutherland Presbyterian church of Indianapolis.

PREVAILING FASHIONS

Said to be Cause of the Rapid Spread of Tuberculosis.

Dissussing the alarming spread of tuberculosis in Columbus and vicinity and the number of deaths the disease has recently caused some of the physicians there to declare the prevailing fashions are largely to blame.

They assert that young girls are permitted to appear in the coldest weather wearing pumps or slippers and stockings so sheer they resemble spider webbing. It is also the fashion just now for the girls to appear with their necks showing and hundreds of Columbus girls are seen in the streets in the most severe weather adhering to this decree. They wear waists cut as low in the neck as a dinner or dance gown was cut in the years gone by and they brave the elements with no covering for neck, throat or chest whatever.

Physicians are pretty well agreed that the practice of wearing thin waists cut low in the neck and without proper clothing under the waists, together with low shoes and thin stockings, is helping the tuberculosis to spread along. They say much of the pneumonia is caused by this foolish exposure of girls and women.

The mothers of girls are being blamed for the practice. If they would require their daughters to wear more clothing and to wear it sensibly there would be less sickness, the physicians say.

Dr. James H. Morrison, Bartholomew county's health commissioner, is again urging physicians of the county to report cases of tuberculosis promptly. Recently he issued a statement telling the physicians they were expected to report tuberculosis the same as any infectious or contageous disease and eight cases of tuberculosis have been reported since that time. However, it is declared that dozens of cases of the disease have not been reported and that deplorable conditions exist in several parts of the county. It is pointed out that a similar number of cases of smallpox would create a tremendous amount of excitement but that little attention is paid to tuberculosis. The people of the county are being called upon to help fight the spread of the disease.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. AFTER TWENTY YEARS PRISON GATES OPEN

Innocent Man Had Been Held All That Time.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 20. — Andrew Toth has been released from the penitentiary here after serving twenty years for a crime he did not commit. He was accused of murdering a fellow workman at the Braddock furnaces and sentenced for life. It was discovered recently that he was half a mile away from the scene of the crime. Governor Tener promptly signed his pardon.

Toth will receive from the Carnegie Steel company at Braddock a pay envelope this week containing $28, which he earned before his imprisonment. The steel company will not only send a personal representative to Toth, who is now with his four sons in Braddock, to give him his long overdue wages, but will add 4 per cent interest compounded semi-annually for twenty years, to the amount.

Andrew Carnegie, it is said, will be appealed to in an effort to have a pension and a sum of money secured from the steel company as a recompense for his false imprisonment. Toth is now arranging to go to his wife in Hungary, whom he has not seen for twenty-six years. He will visit with his sons in Braddock for several weeks and then go back to his native country for a reunion.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON

Noted Negro Educator in Trouble in New York.

COPYRIGHT BY VANDER WEYDE

NOTED NEGRO CHASED IN GOTHAM'S STREETS

Man With Club Gets After Booker T. Washington.

New York, March 20.—Booker T. Washington, the noted negro educator, was brought into the West Sixty-fifth street police station Sunday night by a policeman who had chased him up Central Park west after a scuffle in a hallway at 11½ West Sixty-third street. Albert Ulrich, a carpenter, was arrested on Washington's complaint, charged with assault. Ulrich told the police that he had found Washington peering through a keyhole in an apartment at that address. Washington had two or three scalp wounds and was taken to Flower hospital for treatment.

This is the story as Ulrich told it to the police. He said that his wife had left her room at about 9 o'clock to give one of her dogs an airing. She found in the hallway a negro, who smiled at her as she passed out. He was still there when she came back, and again bowed, she said. Mrs. Ulrich presently set out again with another dog and as she passed the negro he again smiled, she thought, and when she came back he addressed her in a familiar manner. When she got inside she told her husband what she had seen.

Ulrich went out and says he found the negro peering through a keyhole into an apartment on the ground floor.

"What are you doing here?" Ulrich says he asked him.

The negro made no reply, but struck out, barely missing Ulrich. Then he ran past him out into the street, Ulrich following. Policeman Kierney took up the chase and took Washington to the station with Ulrich also going along. Ulrich wanted to make a charge of unlawful entry against Washington, but the charge was not entertained.

At the police station Mr. Washington said that he had received a telegram from the auditor of the Tuskegee Institute, D. E. Smith, asking him to go to the home of Smith's cousin, also named Smith, at 11½ West Sixty-third street. He said that he looked at the names on the bells in the hall of 11½, which is an apartment house, and was unable to find anyone named Smith.

He said that he may have stayed in front of the apartment for a few moments, and that he went back several times to look for Smith. Then he said that Ulrich ran out of the apartment house vestibule and came at him with a club.

JUVENILE COURT

Will Be Held By Judge Shea This Evening.

Judge Shea will hold a session of the juvenile court at his office here this evening. Milton Combs and Millard Adams, two thirteen year old boys, will be before the court. The former is charged with having thrown a rock through the window of a B. & O. S-W. passenger train March 14. With Adams he is also charged with having thrown rocks and other missles at a blacksmith while the latter was at work in his shop in the south part of the city.

The boys were brought in by the officers last week to answer to the latter charge but were released by the court pending a further investigation. They were taken in charge again this morning but were released for the day on the promise of their parents to have them in court this evening.

LINTON COPPIN.

Arrested For Loitering and Will Answer to an Old Charge.

Linton Coppin, who has been out on a suspended sentence for some time, was taken into custody by the officers Sunday night and this morning was taken to Brownstown.

Last fall he was arrested and was found guilty in the circuit court on the charge of stealing some property from a camper on White river. Judge Shea released him on suspended sentence with the understanding that he would go to work and stop his old practice of jumping trains and otherwise violating the laws. He has, according to the officers, failed to live up to promises and he was taken in charge Sunday night on the charge of loitering and jumping trains.

He will now have to answer to the old charge against him. He is past 18 years of age.

Tonight at the Majestic.

One of the greatest attractions at popular prices ever in Seymour will open tonight at the Majestic theatre for a week's engagement, when Ita, the wonderful girl mentalist, from Los Angeles, California, and her new company, the Baker Stock Co., make their initial appearance.

The Baker Stock Co. have added several new members to their cast and a number of new plays to their repertoire since their last appearance in Seymour and will open with the screaming comedy, "Confusion," a sure cure for the "blues," in which the youngest performer in the world, Baby Princess Kramer, plays a prominent part. Ita, who has earned the reputation since coming to Indiana as "the girl they all talk about" will give the demonstrations that have stamped her as one of the most wonderful girls in the world. She gives a performance that must be seen to be appreciated. Coupons will be given that will chance off a ladies' new made-to-order Easter hat Tuesday night. Tuesday at 3 p. m. a matinee will be given for ladies only, no men being permitted in the theatre. This gives Ita a chance to answer questions for ladies of a private nature.

SKIN DISEASES
HUMORS IN THE BLOOD

Nature has made ample provision in the moisture and sunshine of the air for the outward protection and healthy condition of the skin. But the more important work of nourishing the cuticle has been left to an inward source—the blood. It is from the circulation that the pores and glands receive their stimulus, and the fibrous tissues are all preserved in a healthful state because of constant nutriment supplied by the blood. It is only when the circulation becomes infected with humors or acids that we are troubled with skin affections. The humors producing these troubles are carried through the circulation direct to the skin, and their irritating or inflammatory effect remains until the blood is cleansed. S. S. S. cures Skin Diseases, because it is the greatest of all blood purifiers. It goes into the circulation and REMOVES the acids and humors which are causing the trouble, builds up the weak, acrid blood, and completely cures Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Salt Rheum, pimples, rashes, and all eruptions of the skin. When S S S. has driven out the humors every symptom passes away, the skin is again nourished with cooling, healthful blood, natural evaporation is renewed, and the skin becomes soft and smooth. SAN ANTONIO IS TO BE VACATED

General Advance of All Troops Is On the Bills.

ORDERS BEING KEPT SECRET

With the Exception of Cavalry Squadrons Being Dispatched to Guard a Great Bridge Across the Pecos and to Intercept Contraband at Del Rio, Movements of the Bulk of the Forces Are Still Shrouded in Mystery.

San Antonio, March 20.—The first troops of the army of 15,000 men of all branches of the service mobilized here under command of General W. H. Carter started for the border this morning. They will be followed very shortly by every detachment of every branch of the service now in the divisional camp at Fort Sam Houston. The commander of the army does not expect to be here himself or that any of his troops will be here four days hence.

It is known where those who first left San Antonio are going. They are the men of one squadron of cavalry who are going over the Southern Pacific line to the west in the direction of El Paso. Where the rest of the army is to be sent is not known except to the small group of officers constituting General Carter's personal staff. There is a strong belief among the colonels of regiments and their respective staffs that the divisional army is bound for the border along the Rio Grande and west along the Arizona line where the chief streams of insurrecto support are carrying munitions of war across the line.

Will Guard Railway Bridge.

It may be stated positively that the cavalry squadron is being rushed out to the westward to meet a remarkable contingency. The officers of the Southern Pacific railroad have urged the war department in Washington to give protection to their expensive bridge over the Pecos river near the town of Viaduct, in southwestern Texas, and less than ten miles from the boundary of the Mexican state of Coahuila.

Within the last week the insurgent bands that have been operating along the American border east of the Mexican town of Presidio Del Norte have been known to have crossed into Texas more than once. A week ago a brush between insurrectos and federals which occurred on American soil was reported from El Paso. The railroad people have notified the war department in Washington that they fear some contingency, whether the passing of American troops over their lines or an attempt of the insurgents to embarrass the Diaz government by committing depredations on American property, will lead to the destruction of the great steel bridge which springs 225 feet above the Pecos. They could not replace this structure within the year, so the Southern Pacific officers have told the department in Washington.

Border Patrol Strengthened.

All of the cavalry squadron will not stop at the Pecos bridge. A portion will continue on to Del Rio and probably to the Rio Grande to take a position to intercept the traffic in forbidden goods. As to the general movement of all the troops at the division camp at Fort Sam Houston, the utmost secrecy is maintained and little besides the indubitable fact that General Carter expects his command to move sometime within the next four days, can be learned, though every preparation for a speedy movement has been made, even down to the last item of transportation detail.

Word that has come from Mexico City indicates that the preparations for an instant movement may have a bearing on the political squabble in Diaz's capital. An English mining engineer who passed through San Antonio on his way north said that upon the events of the days immediately following Limantour's arrival in Mexico City would depend the solution or the complication of the whole situation across the line.

That anti-American sentiment is gradually crystallizing in Mexico is shown by the attitude of the people and press in various regions. "La Opinion," of Guadalajara, declares that the danger to Mexico does not lie within, but from without, and says that American Socialists have been sent into Lower California as a pretext for the American government to follow and annex territory. "El Globo" of the same town heads an article, "Texas in 1847, Lower California in 1911," and declares that the Texas war was a conquest and that the Americans now want to wage another one.

Guatemalan Conspiracy Revealed.

Mexico City, March 20.—Another conspiracy against the government has been unearthed. This time it is in the state of Chiapas, where a colonel in the Guatemalan army was caught with incriminating documents in his possession. He was immediately arrested and the house in which he was found was searched. Many rifles and 2,000 Mauser cartridges were found hidden about the premises. The colonel has been placed in jail at Tapachula.

OTHER STATES BEING OVERRUN BY REBELS

Mexican Insurrection Growing In Strength Daily.

Torreon, Mexico, March 20.—The rebel forces in the states of Durango and Zacatecas are increasing in strength and constantly widening their scope of operations. Reports received from Durango say that the several bands are occupying position near that city. Practically all of the land owners in the state have temporarily abandoned their properties and the city is full of these wealthy refugees. The southbound trains carry many families of women and children to Mexico City, where they will be afforded better protection in case the revolution becomes more serious.

Many of the federals that were doing patrol duty on the lines of the National Railroad of Mexico between Torreon and Chihuahua, have been killed by rebels during the last few days.

GOT HOME SAFELY

Senor Limantour Had No Difficulty Reaching Mexican Capital.

Washington, March 20.—A telegram has been received at the Mexican embassy announcing the arrival at Mexico City of Senor Limantour. It is of course known that Senor Limantour carried with him important messages bearing on the present situation in Mexico.

An agreement has been reached by the two governments whereby action in the case of Blatt and Converse, the Americans who were arrested by the Mexican authorities, will be expedited. There is an earnest desire on both sides to settle without delay the controversy that has developed over the arrest of the Americans.

NOT PERMITTED TO SEE ANY ONE

Former Indianapolis Councilman Barred From Visitors.

MUCH SPECULATION AROUSED

John F. Wood, Former Councilman, Charged With Forgery and Grand Larceny, Not Permitted to See Anyone—Theory That He Has Important Secrets to Reveal Has Caused Agitation in City Hall Circles.

Indianapolis, March 20.—No one is permitted to enter the Marion county jail to see or talk to John F. Wood, former city councilman, now under arrest for alleged forgery and grand larceny. An order to that effect was made by Judge Markey of the criminal court, partially at the request of Wood, it is said. It has also been ordered that Wood be placed in a cell by himself, because he wished to be alone.

The order is one of the broadest of its kind issued for many years in Marion county, and followed a conference between Wood and Prosecutor Baker. Only in cases where a prisoner is believed to have information that someone might be interested in causing him not to reveal is such a course usually pursued.

There is much speculation about the courthouse and among those interested in the case as to what is taking place in Prosecutor Baker's office. No intimation has been given Mr. Baker, he says, by Wood as to whom he expects to employ as counsel, if any, or when he desires to be tried.

Baker intimated after his conference that Wood did not display unusual interest in his own troubles. Baker says no preparations are being made toward settling the Wood cases on the criminal court calendar, and he has no idea when the cases may be called.

OFFICIAL ATTACKS EDITOR

Fort Wayne Men Mix on Prominent Street Corner.

Fort Wayne, Ind., March 20.—Edward Lennon, chairman of the board of public works, attacked A. J. Moynihan, editor of the Journal Gazette, because of an editorial reflecting on the board which appeared in the paper. The attack occurred at Calhoun and Wayne streets, one of the most prominent spots in the city, and was witnessed by hundreds of persons. While Lennon inflicted at least a dozen blows on the editor's chest and face, the latter got in several good licks for himself before a policeman pulled the combatants apart.

Prosecutor Held to Answer.

Scottsburg, Ind., March 20.—Noble J. Hays, prosecuting attorney of Scott and Jackson counties, was arrested here on a charge of assault and battery preferred by Wylie Hurst, sixty-five years old. It is said Hays was intoxicated and without provocation attacked Wylie and handled him roughly. Hays was taken before a justice of the peace and was released on bond for his appearance in court.

Hartford City, Ind., March 20.—Willard Griffith, fifty-five, unmarried farmer, living northwest of this city, was drowned with his horse while attempting to ford the Salamonie river. TELLS HONAN

That He Has An Ambition to be Governor.

Uncle John Hill of Bartholomew County, who broke into the legislature two years ago and into the papers many times during the session has confided to Attorney General Honan that he has great ambitions. The Indianapolis Star says:

"Former Representative J. H. Hill, of Bartholomew county, was in Indianapolis yesterday on his way to Terre Haute. While here he called on Attorney General Thomas M. Honan and announced that he was a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor two years hence. Confidentially Mr. Hill admitted that he might decide to accept the nomination for lieutenant governor, but would run for governor just the same.

"Mr. Hill is remembered for his famous speech in the Legislature two years ago, in which he denounced "the tarnal, pesky fish laws." The former representative of Bartholomew county views with suspicion the "fish" acts passed by the recent General Assembly and fears that this legislation, coupled with the road supervisor act and the act extending the time of the present township trustees two years, may mean the undoing of his party. Mr. Hill wants it distinctly understood that he is a democrat of the James Madison-Thomas Jefferson school and has no faith in modern frills and schisms.

"Former Representative Hill used to preach regularly, but during late years he has confined himself almost exclusively to funeral sermons and revival meetings."

FOR CONSTIPATION.

A Medicine That Does Not Cost Anything Unless It Cures.

The active medicinal ingredients of Rexall Orderlies, which are odorless, tasteless and colorless, is an entirely new discovery. Combined with other extremely valuable ingredients, it forms a perfect bowel regulator, intestinal invigorator and strengthener. Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy and are notable for their agreeableness to the palate and gentleness of action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience.

Unlike other preparations for a like purpose, they do not create a habit, but instead they overcome the cause of habit acquired through the use of ordinary laxatives, cathartics and harsh physic, and permanently remove the cause of constipation or irregular bowel action.

We will refund your money without argument if they do not do as we say they will. Two sizes, 25c. and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. The Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

A New York judge advocates a law which would limit and regulate the sale of pistols, even if it does not forbid it entirely.. He would require every person offering firearms for sale whether hardware merchant or pawnbroker, to take a license for such privilege, the license fee not to be less than $10 a year. He should sell to no one who could not produce a permit from the police authorities of the town and should then record the date of sale, name of purchaser, his occupation, age and residence, together with such a description of the weapon that it could be identified. The judge holds that the case with which revolvers are obtained is one of the chief sources of crime, a man with one in his pocket feeling at once a sense of power that leads to artificial courage and to acts he would not otherwise undertake. Commonly the man who does use a pistol is too excited to know what he is about, and the judge says he has sentenced any number of young men for manslaughter who, he is sure, never conceived a crime before and would not have committed one except for the dangerous habit of carrying a "gun." The magistrate is undoubtedly right. Revolver carrying should be prohibited. —Indianapolis Star.

William J. Bryan, three times candidates for president, celebrated his fifty-first birthday anniversary Sunday, and in honor of that event a "dollar-dinner" will be given by a number of his friends today. The invited guests have been assured that the dinner is not intended for a presidential boom. This information was doubtless appreciated for the participants, knowing Mr. Bryan's past record, might feel that he was too old to change his ways, and would be in a "receptive mood" when the democrats began considering a presidential candidate.

A GRAVE QUESTION

Has Been Troubling Scott County Officials.

A large swarm of bees—real, old-fashioned honey producers—escaped from their owner in the south, last fall, and in passing over Scottsburg, happened to notice the inviting coolness of the Scott county courthouse yard. It seems the bees were favorably impressed with the courthouse, especially when they found that the cornice around the building was not only hollow, but had crevices in it which made good openings, just about bee size, and they decided to make the friendly cornice their home. They were discovered before more than half the swarm had entered the building and a venturesome young man obtained a long ladder and captured about a gallon of the bees before they had taken refuge in the holes. This spring it developed that a large number of bees had remained in there despite the rumbling of the wheels of justice in the courtroom directly beneath them, and furthermore, that they seem to be increasing.

Now the fact that a swarm of bees had taken up their quarters in the courthouse was in itself not of seeming importance, and did not merit the attention of the county commissioners, but since the bees have decided to stay, complications have arisen. From the activity displayed this spring, it is evident that the bees do not intend to leave, and it is also evident that when the honey factory resumes operation with the coming of spring blossoms, a store of honey will be the result. This phase of the question had not been brought to the attention of the county commissioners until their last meeting, when the subject was taken up and discussed. The proposition began to resolve itself into about the following terms: Who had a right to take the bees away? In what manner should the expense in removing the bees be charged against the county? How much of the courthouse would have to be torn down to get them all out? What would be the result if they were allowed to stay? And who had the right to decide what should be done with the bees?

There was considerable discussion over all of these phases of the matter and the county sheriff, Clarence Wilson, reports that the decision on the bee question was about as follows: That no one had a right to take away the bees because they came from parts remote and their rightful owners were unknown and they, therefore, belonged to the county, that it would not be advisable to attempt to remove should become in danger of being interrupted by their presence; that inasmuch as the cornice extends all around the building and they would have access to all of it, that it would not be advisable to take down the cornice; that no one should be allowed to remove honey from the "hive" without permission from the sheriff or commissioners; that according to all natural laws the bees were sure to multiply with their unlimited space for operating the honey machinery and that the question of their probable number in a few years from now, if unmolested, would be incalcuable, and finally and of really the most importance, it was decided that their product should be the joint property of the county commissioners, and that any commissioner should have the right to extract honey from the cornice at any time, provided that he respect the rights of the other two commissioners in the transaction.

And the bees are still there, working faithfully, all unaware of the commotion they are causing.

The suit filed by Mrs. James H. Findley to set aside the final report of Peter McNerney as executor of the estate of her late husband, was called in the circuit court this morning. McNerney filed his report after he moved to Oklahoma, and Mrs. Findley was appointed executor de bonus non. There seems to be some question regarding the disposition of several lots in Indianapolis. Kochenour & Prince are the attorneys for Mrs. Findley and Walter Meyers, of Indianapolis and Judge John M. Lewis, of Seymour, are representing McNerney.

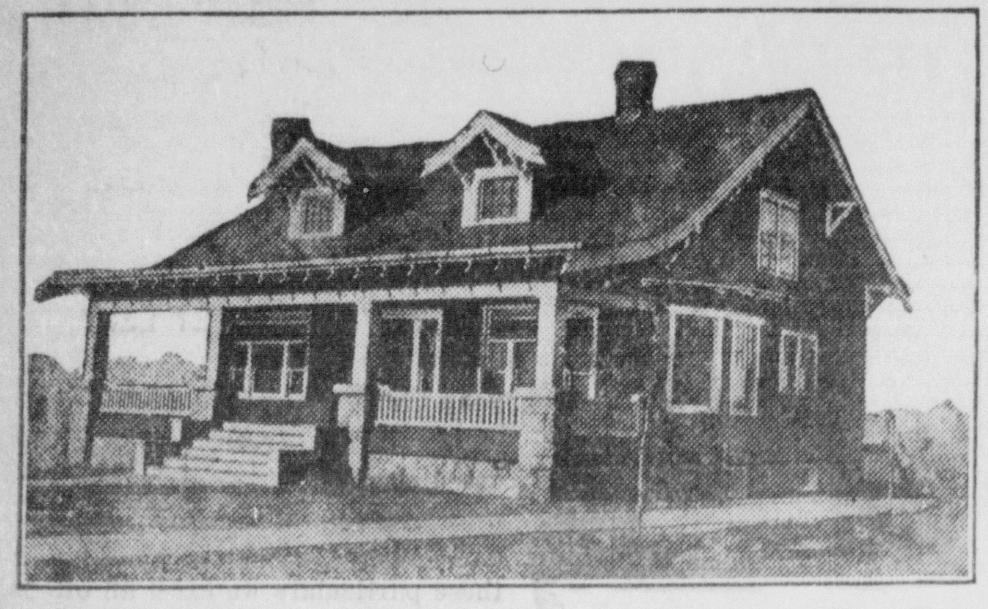
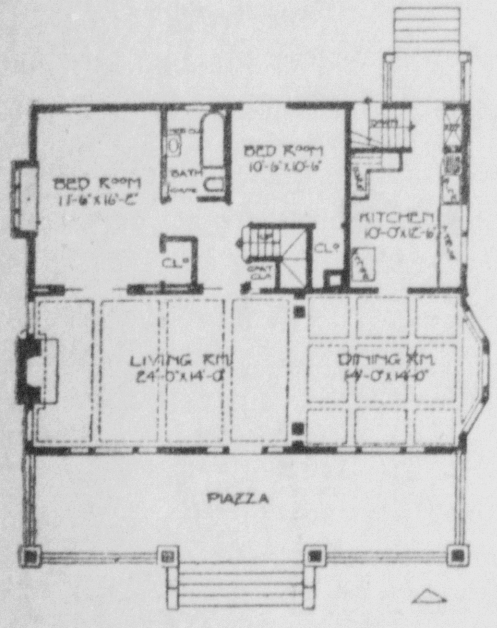
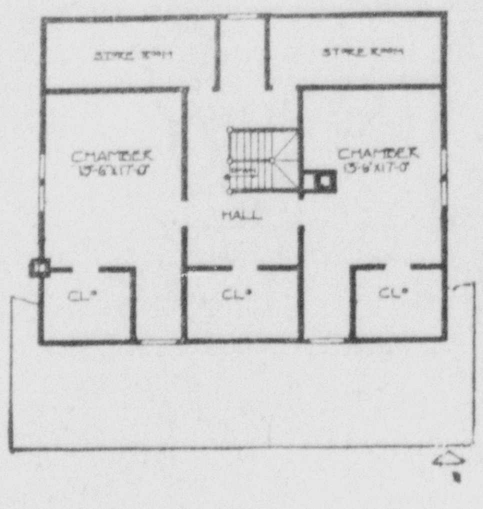
Design E, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.



PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN.



SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

The gable roof, running parallel to the street, extends out over a broad piazza and is broken by two small dormers. The wide cornice is supported by heavy sawed brackets and is further ornamented by wide sawed barge boards. The exterior has a massive and substantial appearance and yet suggests comfort. The arrangement of the rooms is complete, practical and homelike. The stairway is not made a prominent feature in this design, being approached from a small hall. The living and dining rooms can be prettily finished in oak and the balance of first story in birch and the second story in white enameled pine. Size of house forty feet wide and thirty-two feet deep. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $3,900.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish one complete set of plans and specifications of Design E for $25.

CHAPTER II.

WITH an agility surprisingly in contrast with his former decrepit attitude, the intended victim seized his chair and raised it threateningly over his head. The two officers halted. Doyle, regaining a calm demeanor, through the excellent self control which had become one of his valuable assets in his business, spoke easily.

"So you don't want a friend, old fellow?"

Avery lowered the chair.

"No," he snorted, "not any friends that are coppers. Thieves are bad enough."

The point of the reply did not escape Doyle.

"Well," he responded angrily, "you have got me for an enemy all the rest of your worthless life. You'd better come to see me once a month for fear I grab you by mistake—on suspicion."

"To —— with you!" snarled Avery, turning away and facing the warden. "I've got the regular state allowance for released prisoners comin' to me, ain't I?"

"Yes," answered Handler, "and you take it and get out of here, you crook! Here, sign this" (he showed him a paper), "if you can write. If you can't, why, make your mark." The warden handed over a bill.

The departing man scanned the greenback deprecatingly.

"Five dollars," he cried, "and this suit of clothes that a country constable could see the Sing Sing tag on in the night! Pretty good for eight years and ten months' work, eh? And you guys are my friends! For God's sake, let me get out of here, where there are men who don't live on the mistakes of some one else." He wheeled toward the door and disappeared.

"There's one more we've got to keep track of," commented Doyle.

"He'll be at work in a week," said Handler laconically.

"Yes, and I'll nail him and give him back to you."

"I don't want him," the warden put in hastily. "I just might make it tough for him if he was sent back. I thought he had come to his senses and would help you against Valentine, but he's just a plain fool."

MRS. WEBSTER AND MRS. MOORE OF THE GATE OF HOPE SOCIETY.

"And all alike—all blaming us for their fall." The detective seated himself as he spoke. "He can't work now; he's too old. The game as he knew it was the yegg game."

Handler also had resumed his seat, and he leaned over his desk and said significantly: "So you're afraid Valentine will get a new trial, eh? There's some class to Valentine. Have a smoke." The prison master held out a box of perfectos, from which Doyle gratefully extracted a weed.

"Thanks," mumbled the detective. "This Valentine is the only high class crook I ever knew that I couldn't reach and put away for keeps. There's something of a mystery about him. He'd get away with the Raffles game in high society in a walk. The swell dames would go daffy over his good looks and his tony manners and his pleasing voice. Yet he has trailed along with the toughest gang in the business." Doyle paused, then said, "And yet he says he is innocent, I suppose."

"Yes," put in Handler, leaning comfortably in his chair. "Said so last time I talked with him. This prison is killing him. He doesn't like it. He can't stand it. His nerves will stick out through his skin if they jump much more."

"He's the one fellow I think this life would cure. He's a wonder."

"At safes, you mean," was Handler's sarcastic rejoinder.

Little did the warden and the detective realize as they sat and schemed to bring about the further and complete ruin of Jimmy Valentine that "there's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will," and this influence is not denied to those who languish forlorn and hopeless in prison cells.

Little did they know that it might be Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, who was to teach them that the soul of a man is an unquenchable spark that not even years of oppression and degradation can lastingly dim when the spirit wills that they shall not.

And just now there came a knocking at the warden's door that portended much for No. 1289.

The warden's secretary went to the door opening from the office into a waiting room where visitors were received. He returned to announce, "Some members of the Gate of Hope society, and they have the lieutenant governor and his niece with them."

"The lieutenant governor?" ejaculater Handler. "Fay."

"Yes."

"What's the Gate of Hope?" asked Doyle.

"A gang of women tryin' to release from prison convicts they believe are innocent," said the warden.

The detective smiled.

At Handler's order Smith summoned the callers, Doyle making his exit.

"The lieutenant governor," pondered Handler. "I wonder if there's any leak about those contracts for supplies."

Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Webster of the society, middle aged women of pleasing appearance, came in, followed by Rose Lane, the lieutenant governor's niece and that official himself. Miss Lane a young girl of unmistakable charm and beauty, held close to her uncle's side.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR FAY WAS ANNOUNCED.

"Mr. Handler," spoke Mrs. Webster, "we come today with a famous humanitarian, Lieutenant Governor Fay," she pronounced, inclining toward that official.

"Governor," said the warden, bowing. The lieutenant governor shook Handler's hand and presented his niece. The party seated themselves, facing the warden.

"We have come here today," said Mrs. Moore, "to again ask that men be not forced to make confessions while imprisoned here that may be used against them when they leave here. We understand that through the pressure that can be brought to bear on the inmates in these institutions they can be made willing to confess to crimes they never committed."

"What do you mean?" queried Handler.

"Oh, we understand that by depriving prisoners of their proper allowance of food and of small privileges they are allowed, and by bullying conduct on the part of the men in charge of them the inmates can be led to make false confessions involving themselves or others. This information is used against the men after they are released as well as against men who are at large whom the police desire to incriminate."

"No one is ever forced to confess anything here, madam," protested Handler.

"But I know"—

"Pardon me, Mrs. Moore," interrupted the lieutenant governor, rising. "I do not think that in your zeal you realize what you are saying." He addressed the warden. "It seems, however, that these well meaning ladies have evidence that a certain man here did confess some offense to a—a"—

"To a stool," commented Handler. "Am I responsible for the detectives who have men working inside the prison for them?"

"By a 'stool' you mean"—

"A stool pigeon, a decoy. They win the confidence of prisoners and tell what they learn to the detectives."

Mrs. Moore here went on to state that in Sing Sing and in all prisons were confined many innocent men and that in any event released men should be encouraged to live honestly, should be given a chance. They ought not to be pursued and hounded into being spies by detectives anxious to make a record for securing convictions regardless of the truth of the testimony. One reason the woman advanced for her stand was that a man who became a spy or decoy must associate continually with men and women of questionable character, thus rendering it impossible to secure or much less remain in honest employment.

"Bosh!" exclaimed Handler as she ceased. "These folks we get don't want to live straight, won't live straight, can't live straight when they get on the outside. First, they're all lazy; second, most of them are insane.

"What would you call a man," continued the warden, "who does something the law forbids, does it whenever the opportunity offers without a chance of gain? What do you call a man who does a thing for the love of it?"

"An artist," answered Mrs. Webster.

"Artist! Then I've got a lot of them," laughed Handler sarcastically. "Well, to me they are insane."

To Rose Lane the adventure was extremely interesting. Finally succeeding in gaining her uncle's consent to her accompanying him on a visit to the great prison, she was now seeing a little section of the darker side of life which appealed strongly to her imaginative nature. Her cheeks flushed with the excitement of the occasion, this voyage into this famous tomb of living dead men.

As the warden finished she exclaimed, "I once had an experience with a burglar, and"—

"Did he take your jewels?" asked Mrs. Moore sympathetically.

"No. I was in the parlor car in daylight. I was the only person in the car, and this man walked up and accosted me. I reached for the bell for the porter. He struck my wrist. Then he sat on the arm of my chair. He wanted to talk to me, he said. I scarcely knew what to do when a younger man, evidently a gentleman, walked in from the smoking compartment and, taking the man by the arm, led him away."

"How do you know the man was a burglar?" asked the lieutenant governor.

"Listen. I had no more than got my breath when the man came back. He threw his arms about my shoulders and again sat on the chair arm. When I reached for the bell he struck my arm. I screamed. The gentleman who had taken him away before ran into the car, and they fought. I was petrified with fright. The gentleman was much the smaller, and it seemed he would surely be killed when suddenly by some trick he sent the man crashing through the Pullman window. I read in the paper the next day that a famous burglar was found with his skull fractured near the tracks."

A strange light came into Handler's eyes. Was it possible, he thought, that so strange a coincidence—

"Did that occur in this state?" he asked quickly.

"Yes," between Buffalo and Rochester two years ago in June."

The warden compressed his lips firmly.

"Was the dead burglar's name Cotton?" he interrogated earnestly.

"Yes; that's what the papers said. Did you know him?"

"Had him here for five years once. Odd, but we heard he was killed trying to get on a moving train. And, by the way, his particular pal is now in this prison doing ten—safe breaking. His name is Valentine. The story you tell is a brand new one on us."

"And you never saw again the gentleman who rescued you?" queried Mrs. Moore of Miss Lane.

"Never." Into the young girl's face came an expression of mingled sweetness and regret. The woman's question semed to revive in her the memories of a voice and face and a manner and a personality which somehow she had never been quite able to forget.

"We sat and talked for a few minutes," she finally went on. "He told me that there were reasons why he could not let me know who he was and that he could never see me again, though I wanted him to meet my family to receive their thanks for what he had done. He was very nervous, but he had amazing strength for one of his build, as his handling of that ruffian showed. When he shook hands with me I noticed that his hands were very white and smooth and sensitive."

The warden was now leaning over his desk, intent on the girl's words.

"I noticed that he had the habit of frequently pressing one hand nervously into the other, and"—

"He was tall, and he had blond hair," interjected the warden.

The girl gazed at Handler in open mouthed astonishment.

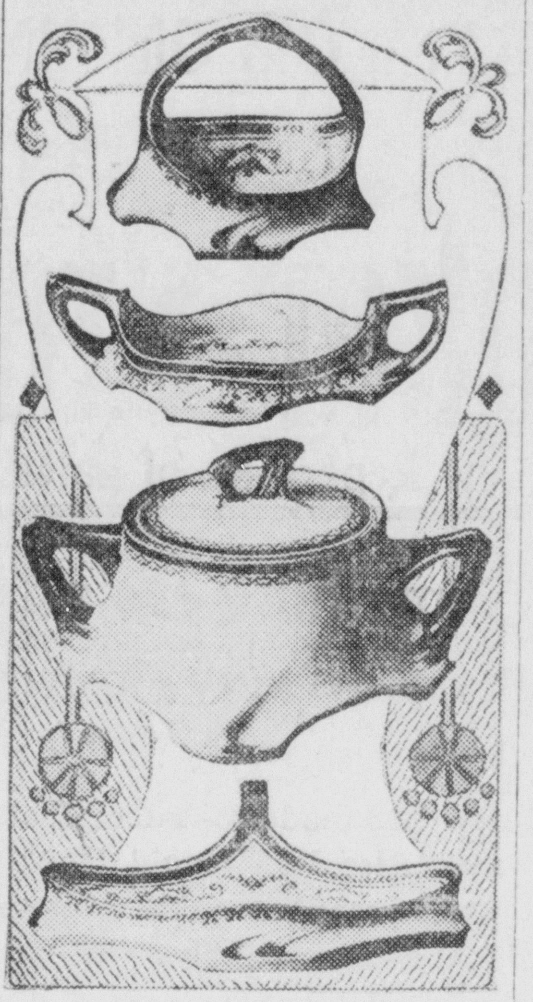
USEFUL NOVELTIES

Portable Refrigerators That Come In Several Sizes.

LATEST FAD IN CHINA.

Silver Deposit Ware Which Is Delicate and Fairylike, but Rather Expensive. Artistic Collapsible Sewing Stand For the Needlewoman.

If you care to spend the money there are any number of ways in which you can make housekeeping a joy and a comfort. For instance, should you live in an apartment or just plain flat you will find a portable refrigerator useful. These are small boxes of zinc that will not exude moisture and retain the cold. They are provided with a handle and stout clasp to be easily carried and are small enough to stow in out of the way places.



THE NEW DEPOSIT SILVER.

These refrigerators come in several sizes, with an inner compartment to hold ice. The smallest will hold several bottles and is useful for a mother who otherwise would have to go to the large refrigerator in the middle of the night for baby's food.

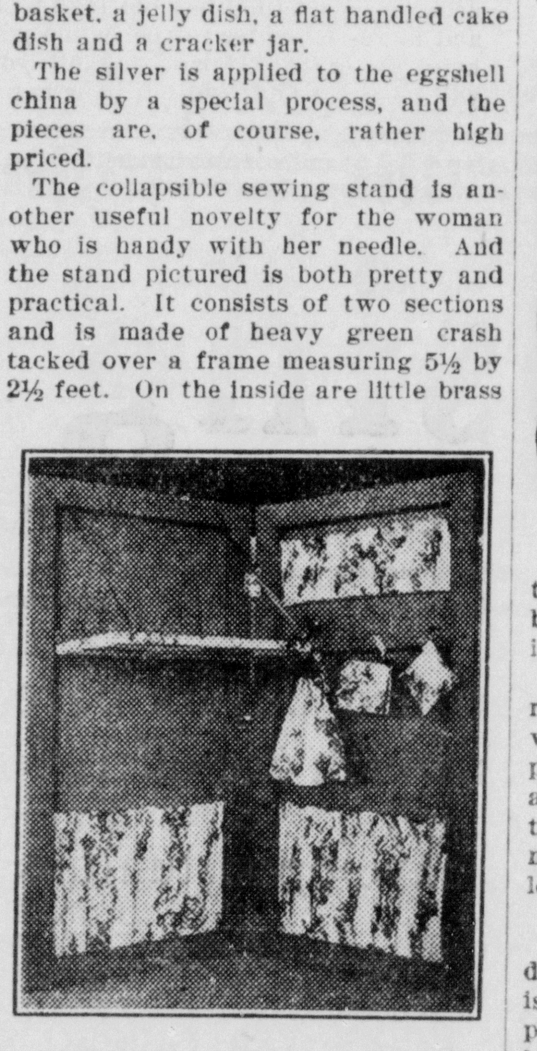
On cold winter nights such a refrigerator is much better than setting food or drinks for an invalid on an outer window shelf. There is not the danger of freezing.

On a motor trip one of these portable ice holders is invaluable and should be owned by those who tour.

For sickroom use there is another refrigerator the height of a chair seat and eighteen inches long. It can be had in various woods, zinc lined, and with commodious compartments. This has no handle, as it is a part of the furniture not to be carried. Then for the table there is the latest fad in china ware, deposit porcelain, a beautiful addition to one's china collection. This ware is almost fairylike in its daintiness of shape and in the delicate effect of the white silver on the white china. There are cups, jars, jugs and plates of the new silver deposit ware, and the illustration shows an almond basket, a jelly dish, a flat handled cake dish and a cracker jar.

The silver is applied to the eggshell china by a special process, and the pieces are, of course, rather high priced.

The collapsible sewing stand is another useful novelty for the woman who is handy with her needle. And the stand pictured is both pretty and practical. It consists of two sections and is made of heavy green crash tacked over a frame measuring 5½ by 2½ feet. On the inside are little brass hooks and a collapsible shelf covered with cretonne, and two large pockets at the base are also of the cretonne. A small pocket at the top for odds and ends of sewing is convenient. Other pockets are for buttons, and there are a pincushion and a needlebook, both of the dainty cretonne.



COLLAPSIBLE SEWING STAND.

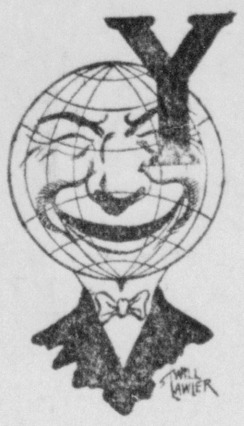
A Hint About Knives.

Knives should never be dipped in hot water, as it loosens the handles. The blades may be placed upright in the water in a mug, by which plan the handles will be kept dry. Steel knives that are not in general use may be kept from rusting if they are dipped in a strong solution of soda (one part water to four parts soda). Then wipe dry, roll in flannel and keep in a dry place.

People of Note In the Limelight

Snapshots at Celebrities Talked About

Gossip of Persons In the Dispatches



YOUNG sprigs of royalty are as apt to assume imperial airs as their elders, who are supposed to. Nevertheless such cases are exceptional, as juvenile princes and princesses are usually taught to be boys and girls while they may. The only son and heir of the czar of Russia, Grand Duke Alexis, has some exalted ideas of dignity and is elated when saluted by the sentries at the various royal residences. It is his habit to constantly pass and repass them in order to be received with honors.

The czar heard of this conceit of his son and gave instructions that the sentries should not be required to salute the czarevitch and that if he should inquire the reason he was to be told that his father had so commanded; hence when the czarevitch made his usual promenade a few days later he was astonished to find he attracted no attention.

GRAND DUKE ALEXIS.

"Do you not recognize me?" he inquired. "Why do you not salute me, as is your duty?"

"His imperial majesty the czar has given instructions that your highness is no longer to be saluted," returned the sentry.

"Oh, has he?" retorted the offended grand duke. "Well, I like to be saluted, so you can continue to salute as usual. I shall not say a word about it to papa, and you must not say anything. Then he won't know about it, and I shall receive the salute that pleases me so much, and we shall be contented all around."

Governor Chase S. Osborn of Michigan has been having warfare with legislators ever since his accession to office by reason of his caustic criticism. For instance, in his inaugural address he referred to saloonists as "saprophytes," and this caused considerable anguish, as some of the lawmakers proceeded to follow his example by employing many syllabled words not in common usage.

CHASE S. OSBORN.

Senator Murtha, who subsequently became embroiled with the governor over matters pertaining to his past life, called Mr. Osborn a "political Cagliostro," pronouncing the name as it is spelled.

"I don't mind being called names," retorted the governor, "but I wish they wouldn't mispronounce them. It is properly pronounced 'Ca-ly-os-tro,' and as nearly as I can determine Cagliostro was an Italian count who stole a necklace. I can't see the exact parallel."

According to several recent precedents the way to succeed in Wall street is by following the paths of newspaperdom. Frank Vanderlip started to help Lyman J. Gage to manage the nation's pocketbook with no better training than he acquired while financial editor on a Chicago paper. Now at forty-seven he is head of a big financial institution and a trustee of the Carnegie foundation. A successful follower in his footsteps is Thomas W. Lamont, six years his junior, who recently joined the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Lamont is a native of New York state, having been born at Claverack, where he attended school, afterward going to Phillips Exeter academy and later to Harvard, where he graduated in 1892. His brother, Hammond Lamont, was then editor of the Nation, so Thomas W. decided to follow active journalism and became a reporter on a New York paper. His interest in business caused him in time to become assigned to the Wall street section, and his knowledge of business methods caused many friends to attempt to persuade him to drop newspaper work.

Finally an opportunity came. A friend who had invested all his savings, some $60,000, with an insolvent concern appealed to Lamont to save him. In the end he not only saved his friend's investment, but returned him a handsome profit. This was his business start. Next he rebuilt an exporting and importing house and attracted the attention of Henry P. Davison, then vice president of a big New York bank, and was made president of a trust company, later filling Mr. Davison's place when that financier went with Morgan. In business intervals Lamont devoted himself to a publishing house, a coal and iron company and a stove polish corporation.

THOMAS W. LAMONT.

His energy had become well known in Wall street by that time, and it occasioned little surprise when on George W. Perkins' retirement J. P. Morgan asked Lamont to become a partner.

Umpire William Dinneen of the American league staff has some novel ideas about running a baseball club and hopes to be able to try them out some day. Dinneen, it will be remembered, was a star pitcher in his day and while with the Boston Americans helped largely to win the world's series from Pittsburg in 1903.

WILLIAM DINNEEN.

"If I owned a major league club," says Dinneen, "I'd invest $15,000 in a first class scout and $5,000 in a manager. You see, any old manager can run a team of real baseball players, but the best leader in the world can't make bad material good. Every team needs a thoroughbred judge of raw playing material more than a teacher of baseball tricks."

America will be well represented in the British amateur golf championship to be held at the Prestwick links, Scotland, May 29 to June 3. Fred Herreshoff and John Anderson announced their intention of competing some time ago, and now Charles (better known as "Chick") Evans, Jr., the youthful Chicago golfer, has joined the list.

CHARLES EVANS, JR.

Evans won the western open title last year from a fast field and was runner up in the national tournament. Members of the Edgewater club, of which Evans is a member, and other Chicago golfing organizations have started a subscription to defray his expenses.

JEWELED PEWTER.

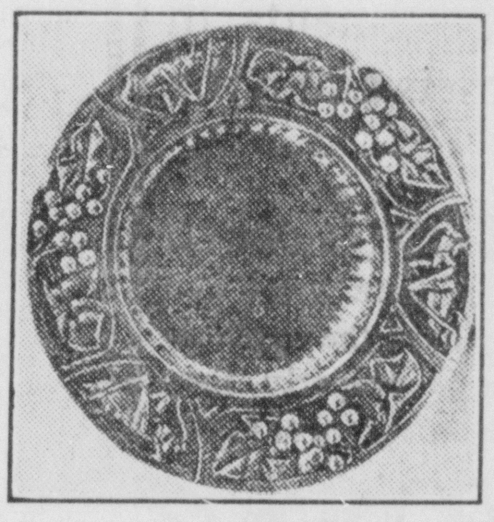
Work Has Great Fascination For European Women.

IS TAUGHT IN CLASSES.

Wonderful Imitations of Precious Stones, Egyptian Scarabs and Many Other Objects Possible to the Skilled Worker In Pewter.

The ornamentation of pewter, brass and copper has always had a great fascination for women. They were undeterred by the time it took to study the work, the arduous labor which was required to execute any given design, the hammering, heating and necessarily soiling of hands, the exceptional artistic capability this work as much as any other craft required from the student.

It must be understood at once that only those who are artistically gifted can even now attain any result worth achieving, and draftsmanship is an asset by no means to be despised. The actual workshop with its furnace and other appliances is, however, an unnecessary adjunct to jeweled pewter work as it will be described in this article. A small table in the drawing room can be devoted to this work, and the student can take it up or lay it down when interrupted by visitors without being ashamed to let her hands be seen or fearing that the work will suffer.



A SALVER IN JEWELED PEWTER.

This particular treatment of pewter, brass and copper has been enthusiastically taken up on the continent of Europe for some time. A friend of the writer, traveling for a long while on the continent, came across it in Switzerland. She saw it again in Berlin and in Paris. At last she settled down to learn the craft. Regular classes are given by proficient teachers, and the hold it has taken on French people was exampled by no fewer than thirty showcases of jeweled pewter ware exhibited last summer in the New salon. The work shown there was mainly confined to beautiful imitation Viennese caskets, a few frames and some artistic imitation jewelry.

Pewter is the softest of the three metals mentioned above, and to its similarity of appearance to silver is probably due the preference given to this metal by workers who naturally study their market.

The metal is bought in thin sheets which are specially prepared for the work. It is always fixed on to a solid foundation, and this precludes it from being confused with solidly hammered metal work of any kind. The jeweled pewter hobby is not only ornamental, but can be turned by any woman with artistic capabilities into excellent uses.

Paris excels in supplying wonderful imitations of precious and semiprecious stones, which add so much to the beauty of pewter work. Egyptian scarabs, which Paris manufacturers, as well as the daintiest china medallions, are exquisitely soft and provide decoration for an almost unending range of objets d'art. In fact, there is nothing the student who has properly mastered her art cannot attempt, from an electric lamp shade down to a hatpin or a button to fasten her jacket with.

Very few implements are necessary for this work. Tools for line drawing, modeling, punching (two or more of different sizes are required), two spatulae for smoothing surfaces, a very light hammer and a gimlet are sufficient tools for the beginner.

The student will want a board to fit the table she decides to work on and according to her designs will want a second underlay of soft felt or baize for certain modeling and a sheet of glass or linoleum where greater resistance is required. Patterns may be bought, but from the very beginning, when once the practice stage is past, the student is advised not necessarily to draw her own designs, but at least to so arrange bought designs that they strike the onlooker as original.

When the pattern has been transferred to the metal the line drawer is used to fix all the outlines of it. Both hands are required to give the necessary strength in thus drawing the pattern. When this is successfully accomplished the worker turns the metal on its obverse side and begins molding her pattern.

Frocks For the Small Maiden.

Shepherd plaids in black and white and blue and white are always good for children's frocks when enlivened by a bit of color and when properly handled have a delightfully childish and simple air.

Some smart little models in these materials have belts of patent leather, and the accompanying scarf of these dresses, which are nearly always made up in Russian or sailor effect, are either black or red.

ILLINOIS AND RACE SUICIDE

Percentage of Children In State Is Low.

HARDIN COUNTY WINS BANNER

In This County, Where the Scream of the Locomotive Never Has Been Heard, Percentage of Juveniles to Adults Is 52, Compared With an Average of 41 Taken the State Over—Cities Show Deficiency.

Washington, March 20.—Race suicide is prevalent in the larger cities of Illinois, according to the census of the juvenile population of that state, just made public by Census Director Durand. But on the farms and in the villages the institution of child propagation flourishes, and down in the corn belt there is no more bountiful harvest than the baby crop.

Babies are scarce in Chicago, where only 39 per cent of the total population of Cook county is composed of boys and girls under twenty-one years of age. It undoubtedly is worse than this in the city itself, for the country territory included in the county raises the actual percentage.

But Chicago is not so badly off in the way of children as Peoria, where the proportion of juveniles to adults drops to 35 per cent. Similarly low proportions prevail in Springfield, Aurora, Joliet, East St. Louis, Rockford Danville and other principal cities.

Down in the south end of the state, far from the stress of urban life, is where infant life teems. The banner baby county is Hardin, cradled in a great bend of the Ohio river in the extreme southeast corner of the state. Here, where the scream of the locomotive never has been heard within the boundaries of the county, and where the telegraph and telephone have only lately penetrated, is the paradise of baby life in Illinois. The percentage of juveniles to adults in Hardin county is 52.

Close competitors of Hardin county in rearing children are the neighboring Hamilton and Johnson, with 51 per cent; Franklin and Gallatin, with 50 per cent each; Calhoun and Clinton, with 49 per cent; and Effingham, with 46 per cent. Similar percentages prevail in the south half of the state and lesser proportions in the north half.

In the entire state there are 2,327,849 persons under twenty-one years, out of a total population of 5,638,591, or a proportion of 41 per cent.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY

Connecticut Boy Kills Father Who Had Slain Mother.

Ansonia, Conn., March 20.—A fire in the home of Thomas Fitzgibbons soon after dark Sunday night revealed a double murder. On the kitchen floor was found the body of Mrs. Fitzgibbons. The head had been almost severed by a blow from an ax. Behind the stove was the body of her husband, the head hacked off. Ten minutes later Thomas Fitzgibbons, jr., son of the couple, was arrested while watching the firemen who had succeeded in saving the house. His clothes were covered with blood. He did not deny killing his father, but laid the death of his mother to the father.

Another Chapter in Feud Case.

Prestonsburg, Ky., March 20.—Another chapter in a noted mountain feud case was closed when Jack McCurry was sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary for complicity in the assassination of Monroe Vance, who was shot from ambush. The killing was the result of an old feud that had involved several generations of the families concerned.

Big Illinois Drainage Project.

McLeansboro, Ill., March 20.—The commissioners of the North Fork drainage district have awarded the contract for excavating thirty-seven miles of ditches and laterals. The work must be completed by Jan. 1, 1913. It will cost $150,000, and will drain 25,000 acres of the bottom land, a large part of which now is worthless.

Going After Fight Fans.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 20.—District Attorney Fredericks has begun issuing warrants for all of the 8,000 persons who witnessed the fight between Wolgast and Memsic, as well as the promoters and principals. Mr. Fredericks contends that the fight was a prize fight within the meaning of the law, and is determined to force a test in court.

DISHWASHING SYSTEMATIZED.

Expert Housekeeper Offers Valuable Suggestions For This Task.

In the average household the washing of dishes is regarded as the severest and most onerous of all the daily tasks. It comes three times daily, for that matter, in the well ordered household, though, sad to say, there are women who wash the dishes only once a day. Mrs. C. T. Herrick, an authority on good housekeeping methods, recently wrote some valuable advice on the subject of dishwashing, from which these suggestions are taken:

Before you wash a single dish or utensil you should have all the soiled articles gathered together and sorted—the silver thrust into a pitcher or laid in a bowl of hot water, the plates and cups emptied, scraped or rinsed; the glasses together, your dish towels and mop and the soap in its soap shaker, your silver polish and bit of flannel at hand to rub off any speck of tarnish or stain you may discover on the silver, the tray on which to range the pieces after they are wiped dry.

When all this is done it is a swift business to wash the glasses in the clean hot suds, to give the rinsed silver its dip, to finish up with the china, small pieces and large. As your towel gets wet you do not have to take time and leave the water to cool while you hunt up another towel, for all you will need are laid ready at your hand.

Compare this way of washing dishes with the haphazard method or lack of method practiced by some housekeepers, who do the pieces at random, who have nothing in order, but wash the articles as they happen to come, leaving the water to chill while they stop to get some necessary help in the work. Is there any real comparison between the ease and comfort of the two styles of doing the task?

An Uncanny Custom.

In ancient Egypt at the end of a fashionable dinner a mummy richly painted and gilded was presented to each guest in turn by a servant, who said: "Look on this. Drink and enjoy yourself. For such as it is now, so thou shalt be when thou art dead."
